PLANNING TO EXPORT PLANT PRODUCTS? A PHYTOSANITARY CERTIFICATE (PC) MAY BE REQUIRED

What is a PC?

A certificate issued by the US or State Department of Agriculture certifying to foreign governments that US plants and plant products are free of harmful pests and diseases.

Most countries have restrictions in place to keep unwanted pests out. They attempt to intercept plants, animals, viruses, fungi and bacteria that threaten an agricultural commodity or natural resource. These countries require plant products being imported to be inspected and declared free of pests through an inspection and a Phytosanitary Certificate.

A full list of the phytosanitary certificates can be found in the How to Obtain Exporting Documents presentation on the DATCP website.
Phytosanitary Certificate Issuance and Tracking System (PCIT)

The PCIT system automates the issuance of a Phytosanitary Certificate, including collection and tracking of its related information, for an eligible agricultural commodity being exported to foreign countries. PCIT is an award winning interactive, Web-based tool which allows you to quickly create and submit applications for Phytosanitary Certificates for the purpose of inspection and exporting of commodities.

Customers using PCIT can communicate securely over the Internet with county, State, and Federal “Authorized Certification Officials” (ACO), which aids in shipping billions of dollars in products each year.

Use this link to access PCIT: https://pcit.aphis.usda.gov/pcit/faces/signIn.jsf
